Alex focuses his practice on complex construction litigation. He represents a range of clients across the industry, including general contractors, subcontractors, designers, and construction professionals involved in high-stakes disputes.

His experience includes multimillion-dollar cases involving claims of construction defects, delays, design flaws, product incompatibility, and personal injury. He has successfully litigated matters involving residential developments, townhome communities, and extensive infrastructure projects. He also has experience working with governmental agencies to coordinate large-scale repairs on behalf of his clients.

Whether advising on construction contracts or defending against defect allegations, Alex is a strategic advocate focused on achieving cost-effective and business-minded outcomes for his clients.
