Chris Napolitano is a business and litigation attorney representing companies, business owners, and public entities across a broad range of litigation and transactions — with a special focus on representing the interests of automotive dealers. His practice includes business, civil rights, consumer, and employment litigation; corporate formation and governance; mergers and acquisitions; real estate transactions; employment law; and regulatory compliance.

For automotive dealers, Chris brings his extensive industry-specific experience to provide counsel on business formation, dealership acquisitions and divestment, regulatory compliance, licensing, manufacturer disputes, policies and procedures, consumer protection claims, and day-to-day employment issues — serving as a trusted advisor for small and large business owners alike in one of the most heavily regulated industries.

Beyond his auto-dealer practice, Chris regularly represents employers in employment litigation and provides practical, proactive employment law and human resources counsel to help businesses reduce legal risk and avoid costly disputes.
